MISS FOWLER'S TROUSSEAU.

Only Trousers, Special Pair Made by Apostle of "New Thought."

Miss Susan Fowler, the trousseau octogenarian apostle of the mystic "New Thought" and Vineland's oddest character, has her wedding trousseau ready and waits but the coming of her sweet-heart from over the seas to be made a bride as coy and blushing as a girl of sixteen, says a Vineland (N. J.) special dispatch to the New York Herald.

Vineland does not believe that George P. Fowler, the Englishman who arrived there a few weeks ago and asked Miss Fowler to marry him, will ever return. He is in England, whither he sailed after one call at Miss Fowler's modest abode.

Only one letter has come from him to assure the woman, nearly forty years his senior, whom he promised to marry, that he will return to claim her for his wife. But Miss Fowler has an unshakable faith in the promises of her forty-six-year-old wooer. She regularly works her little farm, looking after her material welfare, but hour by hour she expects her betrothed to return.

Serene in her confidence, she has prepared her trousseau and proudly exhibits it to callers at her little home on the outskirts of the city. This trousseau consists of a new pair of trousers, made by Miss Fowler's own hands, for never has she consented to be measured by a tailor.

These wedding trousers she made from a pretty brown material, which, by her own statement, cost her 6 cents a yard. She has never donned them yet, nor will she until her wedding day. Just when this will be she does not profess to say, but she believes the time will not now be long deferred and that before many days her home will shelter two persons instead of the one lonely woman who has lived there for more than forty-four years.

Of her wedding plans Miss Fowler has nothing determined. As the marriage would be of minds only, she does not deem a religious or civil ceremony necessary. She sees no reason why her sweetheart may not walk into the house and after some simple ceremony devised by themselves take up his residence there, for better or for worse.

HUCKSTER'S PHONOGRAPH.

Ingenious Man With Weak Voice Makes Machine Announce Wares.

"Red, ripe tomatoes, 8 cents a box."

"Early potatoes, 12 cents a half peck."

"Eggplants, asparagus and all other vegetables."

"Get your marketing now for Sunday."

These sonorous cries, coming from the rear of a wagon standing near Sixth and Market streets in Philadelphia on a recent Saturday afternoon, attracted scores of people to the spot, says the New York Herald. After inspecting the vehicle many of the women who had rushed up went away just as hastily. There seemed to be something uncanny in the cries. They evidently came from the throat of a human being, but the human being was nowhere to be seen.

Several men came along and fingered the potato bags piled high in the rear of the wagon. Under them was a screen and under that a big phonograph with a bigger megaphone. It was talking lustily.

From the other side of the street a small man limped to the side of the wagon. The crowd drew close to listen to him. His voice was scarcely audible.

"I lost my voice by being shot in the civil war," he began, "and thought that this machine would take the place of a voice for me. This was the only business I knew, and I had to keep it up. The scheme has worked great so far everywhere I've tried it today. I've nearly disposed of my stock already."

From the Cretaceous Period.

The marble beds of New Jersey, the chalk beds of England and the limestone beds of Eureka Springs are among the formations of the cretaceous period. These formations contain the fossils of the great reptiles and of the birds that succeeded them.

Precocious Animals.

A guinea pig can run a few hours after birth, and a hare can gallop gayly almost as soon as born. A rabbit, however, can only stand for a moment when a day or two old, but in three or four weeks it has little further to learn.
